We have been favoured with telegraphic advices announcing the issue of an Imperial Decree which should be of special interest to our readers. It is to the effect that the Emperor has justituted an Order or Decoration called the Shuang Lung Pac-hsing, or Star of the Double Dragon, to be conferred entirely upon foreigners. Purely Chinese decorations, which consist of buttons, are of course only adapted to the native costume and are so far unwearable by a foreign recipient This order, however, will be suited to the foreign dress, as it consists of a coloured riband with jewelled star attached. It is divided into five lasses, corresponding with the French degrees of Grand Cross, Grand Officer, Commander, classes is sub-divided into three-sections, so that there are eleven grades in all. The first degree of Grand Cross is to be conferred only upon families; the third upon full ambassadors. Three orders of the Grand Officer's degree have been already conferred upon Sir Thomas Wade, M. Bourée, and Herr von Brandt respectively; while decorations of a lower grade have been bestowed upon M. Dévéria, M. Ristelhueber, and Mr. Walter C. Hillier. The next recipient of this Owing to press of news, some interesting bonour, it is believed, will be Sir Robert Hart. The conferments to mombers of the diplomatic hodies above referred to are, we hear, in acknowledgment of the friendly services rendered by the various recipients during China's recent embroglio-with Russin.

It would seem that on the last voyage of the Anjer Head hence to San Francisco there were among the passengers ten Chinese women. As to five of thom everything would seem to have been in order, but of the other five the Chinese Consul and Customs Officers at San Francisco came to the conclusion that four had been taken by a fifth, a procuress, for immeral purposes. TO SIGNORA S II With the roses of Italy fresh on her cheek She has come from her Western land, Like a ray of light from a broken sky She rests on our Eastern strand! Yet I almost would that the levely maid Had ne'or tradden this island shore, That her steps and mine had never met Till they met for evermore.

For where is the heart that is not won By her lithe and graceful form, Or thrilled by her voice, now low as a lute, Now wild as a mountain storm?

Or whore is the soul that, having felt The weight of her silken chain, Would wish that the fetters were shaken off, Or would fain be free again? Say then what bondago can Fata-bestow

When her angel face is seen no more In the Isle where she conquered all! Is it better, I wonder, to live one's life In the web of Passion's sone, Bewitched by the turn of a woman's arm, Entranced by a woman's tone?

For her lost and worshipped thrall,

A calm and eventless hour, And suffer no joy from a woman's love, No pain from a woman's power? know not, yet, when the envious winds Have wafted her far away, May she sometimes recall the lonely hearts

She has left in the land of Cathay! Hongkong, 2nd May, 1882.
